Aiello, Chicago Gangster, "Put on the Spot"

ONE OF BIG 4 OF CHICAGO'S UNDERWORLD SLAIN

CAPONE'S ENEMY HAD BEEN CALLED "PUBLIC ENEMY" BY CRIME COMMISSION

COUNTY MORGUE PHYSICIANS COUNTED 62 BULLET HOLES IN THE BODY

Chicago, Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—Joe Aiello, one of the big four of the Chicago underworld, was murdered last night by two squads of machine gunners who directed a deadly cross fire of bullets at him as he came out of his hiding place.

Aiello, deadly enemy of Scarface Al Capone, was ambushed by gangster enemies who apparently had lain for days or even weeks in an apartment overlooking the gang leader's hideout awaiting the moment they could open fire.

Capone's enemy, who was called a "public enemy" by the crime commission, fell, 32 bullets in his back, one through his left eye, his right great toe shot away and his right leg broken in two places by slugs.

County morgue physicians had counted 62 bullet holes and said there might be more.

The murder occurred in a fashionable residential district on North Kolmar Avenue on the northwest side. The only witness was James Ruane, taxicab driver, who had been called to the apartment where Aiello, who, like many other gang leaders had been a fugitive since Alfred Lingle was killed on June 9, was hiding.

Ruane entered the hallway, found the bells out of order, kicked on the corridor door to notify his fare that he had arrived and started back to his cab. The fare, who was Aiello, followed about 15 feet in the rear.

As he opened the cab door, the driver heard a noise across the apartment courtyard. He turned and saw a window opening slowly. A cumbersome looking object was laid across the sill. There was a burst of flame.

As the courtyard rang with the roar and the echo of the machine gun fire and the crack of splintering wood and shattered glass, Aiello staggered, shouted something unintelligible, glared for a moment, terrified, at the machine gun nest, then turned and half ran, half stumbled around a corner and into a narrow court.

There he halted as if to congratulate himself upon his escape. But his enemies had anticipated he might use just this avenue of escape. There was a second burst of fire, this one from the rear of the narrow court.

The roar of the machine gun in the little enclosure was deafening. It continued for a moment, echoes folllowed, and the clamor died out. Deathly silence followed. Ruane ran from behind his car. Motorcycle Policeman Charles Fuller, who lives a block away, had heard the shots and joined the cab driver. They placed Aiello's body in the cab and took it to a hospital.

Aiello's identity was a mystery for an hour until his name was deciphered on a badly worn coat lapel.

Detectives broke into the apartment from which the bullets had been fired. They found evidence that a group of men had been waiting there for days and were prepared to wait many more days if necessary to get Aiello "on the spot."

The room contained enough canned food to last four men a month, the officers said.

Several windows of the house were shattered, but none of the occupants were hurt. Conner said he believed the shots were fired from an automobile that raced by.

STAGGERED HOURS OF LABOR TO AID UNEMPLOYMENT

FULL TIME EMPLOYES TO SHARE THEIR CHANCE TO WORK WITH THE IDLE

EXPEDIENT EMERGES AS MOST POTENT STOP-GAP TO COPE WITH PROBLEM

By LYLE C. WILSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Oct. 24.—The expedient of staggered hours of labor in which full time employes share their opportunity to work with the idle was emerging today as among the most potent stop-gap means of coping with unemployment.

Secretary of War Hurley launched the idea publicly here. He announced a staggered work-week on the Mississippi flood control project.

Postmaster General Brown has adopted a variant of this system in an order to suspend overtime work throughout the postoffice system. Substitutes will be hired to do the work regular employes hitherto have been privileged to perform beyond their regular shifts. This plan probably will be followed in other departments.

Reports to the White House indicate industry generally is awake to this expedient. Whether it will be recommended to private employers has not been determined, but Secretary of Commerce Lamont believes that must be considered by the president's cabinet council on unemployment.

Announcing abandonment of reorganization plans which would have required gradual discharge of about 500 persons in the United States and 250 abroad, Chairman O'Connor of the shipping board said the payroll reduction would have saved the government more than $1,000,000 a year.

O'Connor's policy, announced before a conference with Lamont, is accepted here as a lead which other federal officials will follow. Any contemplated reductions of pay rolls in navy yards or elsewhere probably will be postponed at least until next spring, even if a distinct saving could be accomplished by cutting.

Another fundamental now being stressed is that men with families must be given priority in obtaining employment. Postoffice workers for the Christmas rush will be chosen on that basis.

MAYOR THOMPSON SPLITS WITH BODY OF REPUBLICANS

CHICAGO EXECUTIVE AND COOK COUNTY REPUBLICAN CLUB AT OUTS

OVER SENATORIAL CANDIDACY OF RUTH HANNA McCORMICK

Chicago, Oct. 24.—(U.P.) — Relations between the Cook county republican organization and Mayor William Hale Thompson, one of its most powerful factional leaders, were definitely broken today over the senatorial candidacy of Ruth Hanna McCormick.

Led by Chairman Bernard W. Snow, the county committee voted late yesterday to remain "regular," and in so doing chose to ignore Thompson's bolt from Mrs. McCormick, the head of the ticket. In approving a campaign circular to be used during the rest of the campaign, the committee directed that the words "vote the straight republican ticket November 4" be added at the end of the leaflet.

Nothing was said officially at the meeting about Thompson's call on the negro voters of Chicago to scratch Mrs. McCormick's name and vote for James Hamilton Lewis, the democratic nominee. The inference, however, was unmistakable that the committee felt certain its ticket would win, whether Thompson backed it or not.

Thompson held up his side of the feud by charging that Mrs. McCormick broke her word to him in an agreement in 1928 and "since that time she has never been annoyed with any personal support from me."

"As long as I am permitted to live, I will never betray the people of Chicago by voting for any member of the McCormick family," Thompson said in a statement published last night.

Rumors That President Hoover and His Law Enforcement Body May Favor 4.4 Pct. Beer

ATTITUDE OF SILENCE AT THE WHITE HOUSE

PRESIDENT AND HIS ASSOCIATES DO NOT CARE TO DIGNIFY BY OFFICIAL DENIAL

UNCONFIRMED INFORMATION WHICH HAS RUN OVER PRIVATE WIRES OF BROKERS

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—An attitude of silence is being maintained at the White House in the face of rumors that President Hoover and his law enforcement commission soon may recommend 4.4 per cent beer.

The president and his associates have indicated they do not care to dignify by an official denial the unconfirmed information which has run over the private wires of brokers.

Unofficially the reticence of the administration high command is explained by the imminence of the congressional election in which prohibition is such an outstanding issue. Privately, those in authority here suggest the unverified report may have been spread by those interested in promoting the wet cause at the polls.

The administration leaders wish to avoid any possible charge of aiding either side with affirmations or denials they say.

There is, however, a strong indication in the highest quarters that the Wickersham commission is contemplating a report which may not be acceptable to some extremely dry organizations.

Some portions of the commission report are known to have been tentatively drawn, but not completed. The commission will meet here Nov. 5, the day after election to adopt its conclusions. The report is scheduled to be in the hands of the president by the middle of November and may be sent to congress when it reconvenes the early part of December.

The 4.4 per cent alcoholic content figure has not before been mentioned. One half of one per cent is allowed by the Volstead act. Demands have been made by some wet organization for 2.75 per cent beer. There is a dispute as to whether such beer would be "non-intoxicating in fact."

If the Wickersham commission should decide the cause of law enforcement would be better served by an increase in the alcoholic content of beer, the change could not be wrought either by the commission or the president. It would have to be enacted by congress, a majority of the house and senate. It probably would take the form of a proposed amendment to the Volstead act.

COSTES, BELLONTE ARE NOW BACK IN THEIR HOMELAND

FRANCE'S WELCOME TO AIRMEN WILL SURPASS ANY PREVIOUS CIVIL WELCOME

AIRPLANE QUESTION MARK RIDING PROUDLY ON FORWARD DECK OF LINER FRANCE

By RALPH HEINZEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Havre, France, Oct. 24.—Dieudonne Costes and Maurice Bellonte arrived here on the liner France today, with their trans-Atlantic airplane Question Mark riding proudly on the forward deck illuminated by a battery of flood lights.

Correspondents waited five hours to meet Coste aboard, and they found the Georgian princess, Madame Mary Costes, by his side when he received them.

Madame Bellonte remained in Paris to greet her husband there. The beautiful Madame Costes, dressed gorgeously in a brown ensemble, smiled when correspondents questioned her, but declined to discuss her statement that she and the pilot were married on the eve of his trans-Atlantic flight.

France's welcome to the airmen who flew for the first time over the reverse of the "Lindbergh trail" was expected to surpass any civic welcome since Paris paid clamoring tribute to the aged Victor Hugo in 1881.

NEWSPAPER MAN SERIOUSLY WOUNDS DEPUTY SHERIFF

ELMER JONES OF GUYAN VALLEY NEWS, MADISON, W. VA., ADMITS SHOOTING

ALTERCATION WHEN DEPUTY SULLIVAN ALLEGEDLY WAS BREAKING INTO PLANT

Madison, Wis., Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—Elmer Jones, assistant editor of the Guyan Valley News, a weekly newspaper, shot and seriously wounded Deputy Sheriff Amos Sullivan today while Sullivan allegedly was trying to break into the newspaper plant.

After an investigation Jones was arrested on charges of malicious wounding. He was released on bond, pending developments in the deputy's condition.

Luther Jones, his brother and editor of the paper, said he believed Sullivan intended to destroy the newspaper plant because of the weekly's vigorous attacks upon the so-called "Hatfield clique" in Logan county.

The weekly is printed in Madison but most of its circulation is in Logan county.

Sullivan was taken to Logan hospital. Physicians said he was shot in the stomach.

BURGLAR PICKS THE WRONG PLACE FOR OPERATIONS

New York, Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—A burglar attempting to ransack a Park avenue apartment made a tactful error by picking out the suite of Mark O. Prentiss, chief organizer of the national crime commission and author of many articles on crime.

Prentiss entered the apartment while the man was picking up several pieces of jewelry off a table. The author seized a Turkish sabre which hung on the wall and forced the burglar into a chair, holding him there while he phoned police. The burglar said he had been forced into stealing by unemployment.

STRANGER INFORMS MOTHER OF DEATH OF HER LITTLE SON

New York, Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—A stranger knocked on Mrs. Gustave Gunderson's door and asked excitedly if he could use the telephone.

Mrs. Gunderson heard him tell police that a child had been killed in front of the house.

She ran outside and found the body of her four-year-old son, Walter, in the street, the victim of a hit-and-run driver.

AMERICAN STEEL INDUSTRY IN LINE FOR BIG BUSINESS

CHARLES M. SCHWAB ISSUES AN AUTHORITATIVE STATEMENT

BUSINESS REVIVAL IN NATION TO BRING LARGE MEASURE OF PROSPERITY

New York, Oct. 24. — (U.P.) — The American steel industry, a corner stone of the nation's business, is now preparing to meet a greater future demand for its products than ever realized in the past and "will lead the march to prosperity," President Charles M. Schwab of the American Iron & Steel institute declared today at the semi-annual meeting of the institute.

The steel industry, Schwab asserted, has held true to its pledge of six months ago that it would not cut wages and has "substantially" avoided the traditional practice of wholesale lay-offs of employees.

"Progress is born out of the pains of economic adjustment," the veteran steel executive said in discussing the general business situation. "The past 12 months are the first real test we have had or our new 'American prosperity,' by which I mean the basic factors underlying our higher standards of living, including mass production and distribution and high wages.

"It is significant that there has not been uncovered in our economic foundation any basic structural failures.

"Because of this I believe that business revival will bring to tihs country a larger measure of prosperity than the American people have ever before konwn."

Admitting that there is marked unemployment in certain areas and lines of business, Schwab called attention to the fact that "a number of the large industries" have parcelled out their work and kept most of their employees on the payrolls.

"The situation as a whole is much improved over what it would be if large industrial lay-offs were the practice," he said.

"The steel industry today is more actively engaged than ever before in my long experience with it, in the cultivation and expansion of its markets, in the stabilization of its policies and in the improvement of its plants and organization. Moreover, it is preparing to meet a greater future demand for our products than we have ever realized in the past.

"And when I say that we are moving forward, I am not overlooking the fact that there are many at home and abroad who can see things only through spectacles darkened by immediate but transient gloom."

BANK BANDITS GET SMALL LOOT

LESS THAN $1,000 TAKEN FROM FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK OF DELHI

St. Paul, Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—Less than $1,000 loot was taken by bank bandits that held up the Farmers & Merchants State Bank at Delhi while two suspects were arrested near Wionna after another bank raid late yesterday.

Two men entered the Delhi bank while their companion stayed in an automobile. They ordered Harold Butcher, cashier, and Ardner Peterson, bookkeeper, to the floor and then rifled the till and safe. The two bank employees were locked in the vault by the two bandits but managed to escape by releasing themselves from the inside almost before the bandit car sped out of town.

At Stockton, seven miles west of Winona, G. H. Seltz, cashier of the Farmers State Bank, ran out of the bank when two youths told him to throw up his hands. The two raiders ran for their car as Seltz spread the alarm. Winona police hurried to Stockton and arrested two men after a chase over the hillside.

The men gave their names as Bernard Flannagan, 23, and Victor Gago, 23, both of Winona. Police said the young men had admitted they planned to hold up the bank for "easy money."

HAIL AND FAREWELL

Gen. Charles P. Summerall (left) as he arrived in Chicago October 22 to say farewell in his capacity as chief of staff of the United States Army, which he has served forty-two years. Gen. Summerall, sixth four-star general in the nation's history, was greeted by Maj. Gen. Frank Parker of the Sixth Corps Area as he stepped from the train. He reviewed an aerial pageant staged in his honor and spoke of the army's part in the nation's progress.

FEDERAL TROOPS AT THE CAPITAL JOIN IN REVOLT

PRESIDENT WASHINGTON LUIS RESIGNED, MILITARY JUNTA NOW IN CHARGE

CASTRO IS PROVISIONAL PRESIDENT, NEW CABINET TO BE NAMED SOON

By C. A. POWELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, Oct. 24.—The Brazilian revolution triumphed today.

President Washington Luis resigned when the main part of the federal forces stationed in the capital went over to the revolution.

In the face of an ultimatum giving him until 10 o'clock to get out of office and save further bloodshed on the fighting fronts, Washington Luis resigned at 9:40 A. M.

A military junta or committee headed by Gen. Leite De Castro took over the reins of power. With Leite De Castro as provisional president, it was expected congress would be dissolved and a new cabinet named.

The end of the revolution, which started on Oct. 3, came with incredible swiftness. A long-drawn struggle had been expected and almost until the hour of its doom, the government had been issuing optimistic statements of its success on the southern fighting front.

Vandalism and rioting broke out in the capital soon after the overthrow of the government.

Mobs stormed the newspapers A Noite, Vanguardia, O Pais, A Noticia, Gazeta Noticias, Critica and Ordem.

At the Noite building the mob entered the offices of the publisher, Geraldo Rocha, tearing apart the palatial furnishings and throwing them into the streets, where they were made into bonfires. Rocha was not in the building but it was reported the manager, Ismael Maia, was maltreated and his office wrecked.

Other newspapers were similarly wrecked.

The government organs and independent newspapers which had favored the government suffered most heavily. Although the actual revolution was accomplished with comparative calm and little or no bloodshed, rioting and banditry began to break out through the city not long afterwards.

Overnight, the destinies of Brazil, a country of 40,000,000 population with an area larger than the United States, were turned over to a revolutionary leadership backed by force of arms. It is the fourth South American republic to undergo a revolution in the last few months, the others having been Argentina, Peru and Bolivia.

It was the defection of the garrison at the important coast artillery post of Copacabana fortress, at Rio De Janeiro, backed by the third regiment, that turned the tide for the revolutionaries. Leite De Castro issued an announcement saying he had gone over to the revolution "to save needless bloodshed and fighting between brothers."

The new leader had not hitherto been especially prominent in the revolution. He is a military man, most of whose career has been spent in the army.

The sudden overthrow of the government leaves heavy forces of federal and revolutionary troops confronting each other on the Parana-Sao Paulo border, in the south, and at various points elsewhere in the nation. All fighting was expected to cease while the leaders of the revolt hastened to Rio De Janeiro to decide on the form of the provisional government.

There had been rumblings of trouble at the garrisons for two days, but the sharp call of a bugle at the third regiment quarters at 2 A. M. today was a surprise for the government. The bugle was a signal that the ultimatum demanding resignation of the president had been sent to the palace. The ultimatum was accompanied by a warning that unless the president resigned, the heavy guns of the artillery would be trained on the capitol.

Four airplanes which went over to the rebels last night, flew over the city dropping pamphlets, calling on the people to join the revolution. The pamphlets were signed by Cetulio Vargas, leader of the revolution.

Guns at Copocabana fortress boomed soon after the bugle signal, warning the government of the bombardment if it failed to meet the insurgent demands. It was announced the rebels were ready to take the capital by force if necessary.

Although the president and his family and chief government officials were assured of safety if they resigned, the rebel leaders said they would march into Guanabara palace if the government attempted to resist.

After three weeks of mobilization of men and supplies on a war basis, the population advanced into the streets to express their satisfaction with hte new regime. Groups gathered in the downtown districts, shouting the names of Poao Pessoa, Getulio Argas — who as president of Rio Grande Do Sul led the southern rebel movement—and other rebel leaders.

Police were mobilized to maintain order but the crowds were highly excited, listening to extemporaneous orators and shouting that the resignation

COSTES, BELLONTE ARE NOW BACK IN THEIR HOMELAND

FRANCE'S WELCOME TO AIRMEN WILL SURPASS ANY PREVIOUS CIVIL WELCOME

AIRPLANE QUESTION MARK RIDING PROUDLY ON FORWARD DECK OF LINER FRANCE

By RALPH HEINZEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Havre, France, Oct. 24.—Dieudonne Costes and Maurice Bellonte arrived here on the liner France today, with their trans-Atlantic airplane Question Mark riding proudly on the forward deck illuminated by a battery of flood lights.

Correspondents waited five hours to meet Coste aboard, and they found the Georgian princess, Madame Mary Costes, by his side when he received them.

Madame Bellonte remained in Paris to greet her husband there. The beautiful Madame Costes, dressed gorgeously in a brown ensemble, smiled when correspondents questioned her, but declined to discuss her statement that she and the pilot were married on the eve of his trans-Atlantic flight.

France's welcome to the airmen who flew for the first time over the reverse of the "Lindbergh trail" was expected to surpass any civic welcome since Paris paid clamoring tribute to the aged Victor Hugo in 1881.

NEWSPAPER MAN SERIOUSLY WOUNDS DEPUTY SHERIFF

ELMER JONES OF GUYAN VALLEY NEWS, MADISON, W. VA., ADMITS SHOOTING

ALTERCATION WHEN DEPUTY SULLIVAN ALLEGEDLY WAS BREAKING INTO PLANT

Madison, Wis., Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—Elmer Jones, assistant editor of the Guyan Valley News, a weekly newspaper, shot and seriously wounded Deputy Sheriff Amos Sullivan today while Sullivan allegedly was trying to break into the newspaper plant.

After an investigation Jones was arrested on charges of malicious wounding. He was released on bond, pending developments in the deputy's condition.

Luther Jones, his brother and editor of the paper, said he believed Sullivan intended to destroy the newspaper plant because of the weekly's vigorous attacks upon the so-called "Hatfield clique" in Logan county.

The weekly is printed in Madison but most of its circulation is in Logan county.

Sullivan was taken to Logan hospital. Physicians said he was shot in the stomach.

BURGLAR PICKS THE WRONG PLACE FOR OPERATIONS

New York, Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—A burglar attempting to ransack a Park avenue apartment made a tactful error by picking out the suite of Mark O. Prentiss, chief organizer of the national crime commission and author of many articles on crime.

Prentiss entered the apartment while the man was picking up several pieces of jewelry off a table. The author seized a Turkish sabre which hung on the wall and forced the burglar into a chair, holding him there while he phoned police. The burglar said he had been forced into stealing by unemployment.

AMERICAN STEEL INDUSTRY IN LINE FOR BIG BUSINESS

CHARLES M. SCHWAB ISSUES AN AUTHORITATIVE STATEMENT

BUSINESS REVIVAL IN NATION TO BRING LARGE MEASURE OF PROSPERITY

New York, Oct. 24. — (U.P.) — The American steel industry, a corner stone of the nation's business, is now preparing to meet a greater future demand for its products than ever realized in the past and "will lead the march to prosperity," President Charles M. Schwab of the American Iron & Steel institute declared today at the semi-annual meeting of the institute.

The steel industry, Schwab asserted, has held true to its pledge of six months ago that it would not cut wages and has "substantially" avoided the traditional practice of wholesale lay-offs of employees.

"Progress is born out of the pains of economic adjustment," the veteran steel executive said in discussing the general business situation. "The past 12 months are the first real test we have had or our new 'American prosperity,' by which I mean the basic factors underlying our higher standards of living, including mass production and distribution and high wages.

"It is significant that there has not been uncovered in our economic foundation any basic structural failures.

"Because of this I believe that business revival will bring to tihs country a larger measure of prosperity than the American people have ever before konwn."

Admitting that there is marked unemployment in certain areas and lines of business, Schwab called attention to the fact that "a number of the large industries" have parcelled out their work and kept most of their employees on the payrolls.

"The situation as a whole is much improved over what it would be if large industrial lay-offs were the practice," he said.

"The steel industry today is more actively engaged than ever before in my long experience with it, in the cultivation and expansion of its markets, in the stabilization of its policies and in the improvement of its plants and organization. Moreover, it is preparing to meet a greater future demand for our products than we have ever realized in the past.

"And when I say that we are moving forward, I am not overlooking the fact that there are many at home and abroad who can see things only through spectacles darkened by immediate but transient gloom."

BANK BANDITS GET SMALL LOOT

LESS THAN $1,000 TAKEN FROM FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK OF DELHI

St. Paul, Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—Less than $1,000 loot was taken by bank bandits that held up the Farmers & Merchants State Bank at Delhi while two suspects were arrested near Wionna after another bank raid late yesterday.

Two men entered the Delhi bank while their companion stayed in an automobile. They ordered Harold Butcher, cashier, and Ardner Peterson, bookkeeper, to the floor and then rifled the till and safe. The two bank employees were locked in the vault by the two bandits but managed to escape by releasing themselves from the inside almost before the bandit car sped out of town.

At Stockton, seven miles west of Winona, G. H. Seltz, cashier of the Farmers State Bank, ran out of the bank when two youths told him to throw up his hands. The two raiders ran for their car as Seltz spread the alarm. Winona police hurried to Stockton and arrested two men after a chase over the hillside.

The men gave their names as Bernard Flannagan, 23, and Victor Gage, 23, both of Winona. Police said the young men had admitted they planned to hold up the bank for "easy money."

FEDERAL TROOPS AT THE CAPITAL JOIN IN REVOLT

PRESIDENT WASHINGTON LUIS RESIGNED, MILITARY JUNTA NOW IN CHARGE

CASTRO IS PROVISIONAL PRESIDENT, NEW CABINET TO BE NAMED SOON

By C. A. POWELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, Oct. 24.—The Brazilian revolution triumphed today.

President Washington Luis resigned when the main part of the federal forces stationed in the capital went over to the revolution.

In the face of an ultimatum giving him until 10 o'clock to get out of office and save further bloodshed on the fighting fronts, Washington Luis resigned at 9:40 A. M.

A military junta or committee headed by Gen. Leite De Castro took over the reins of power. With Leite De Castro as provisional president, it was expected congress would be dissolved and a new cabinet named.

The end of the revolution, which started on Oct. 3, came with incredible swiftness. A long-drawn struggle had been expected and almost until the hour of its doom, the government had been issuing optimistic statements of its success on the southern fighting front.

Vandalism and rioting broke out in the capital soon after the overthrow of the government.

Mobs stormed the newspapers A Noite, Vanguardia, O Pais, A Noticia, Gazeta Noticias, Critica and Ordem.

At the Noite building the mob entered the offices of the publisher, Geraldo Rocha, tearing apart the palatial furnishings and throwing them into the streets, where they were made into bonfires. Rocha was not in the building but it was reported the manager, Ismael Maia, was maltreated and his office wrecked.

Other newspapers were similarly wrecked.

The government organs and independent newspapers which had favored the government suffered most heavily. Although the actual revolution was accomplished with comparative calm and little or no bloodshed, rioting and banditry began to break out through the city not long afterwards.

Overnight, the destinies of Brazil, a country of 40,000,000 population with an area larger than the United States, were turned over to a revolutionary leadership backed by force of arms. It is the fourth South American republic to undergo a revolution in the last few months, the others having been Argentina, Peru and Bolivia.

It was the defection of the garrison at the important coast artillery post of Copacabana fortress, at Rio De Janeiro, backed by the third regiment, that turned the tide for the revolutionaries. Leite De Castro issued an announcement saying he had gone over to the revolution "to save needless bloodshed and fighting between brothers."

The new leader had not hitherto been especially prominent in the revolution. He is a military man, most of whose career has been spent in the army.

The sudden overthrow of the government leaves heavy forces of federal and revolutionary troops confronting each other on the Parana-Sao Paulo border, in the south, and at various points elsewhere in the nation. All fighting was expected to cease while the leaders of the revolt hastened to Rio De Janeiro to decide on the form of the provisional government.

There had been rumblings of trouble at the garrisons for two days, but the sharp call of a bugle at the third regiment quarters at 2 A. M. today was a surprise for the government. The bugle was a signal that the ultimatum demanding resignation of the president had been sent to the palace. The ultimatum was accompanied by a warning that unless the president resigned, the heavy guns of the artillery would be trained on the capitol.

Four airplanes which went over to the rebels last night, flew over the city dropping pamphlets, calling on the people to join the revolution. The pamphlets were signed by Cetulio Vargas, leader of the revolution.

Guns at Copocabana fortress boomed soon after the bugle signal, warning the government of the bombardment if it failed to meet the insurgent demands. It was announced the rebels were ready to take the capital by force if necessary.

Although the president and his family and chief government officials were assured of safety if they resigned, the rebel leaders said they would march into Guanabara palace if the government attempted to resist.

After three weeks of mobilization of men and supplies on a war basis, the population advanced into the streets to express their satisfaction with hte new regime. Groups gathered in the downtown districts, shouting the names of Poao Pessoa, Getulio Argas — who as president of Rio Grande Do Sul led the southern rebel movement—and other rebel leaders.

Police were mobilized to maintain order but the crowds were highly excited, listening to extemporaneous orators and shouting that the resignation

McCORMACK GREAT IN "SONG O' MY HEART"

Citizens Offer Testimonial of Idealistic Film at Preview Today

John McCormack sung his way into the hearts of Brainerd citizens privileged to see and hear the preview of "Song O' My Heart" this morning at the Paramount theatre as the great Irish tenor has to millions of others who have heard his voice in opera, over the radio and on phonograph records.

The great tenor sings eleven songs which have endeared him to audiences all over the world. The play will appear at the Paramount theatre Sunday only.

A few of the testimonials of the picture by Brainerd people follow:

Mrs. W. C. Cobb: "The picture combines charming Irish scenes, dramatic interest and a stirring of the emotions that only the voice of John McCormack can arouse."

Mrs. W. H. Gemmell: "A wholesome, beautiful play."

Mrs. S. Newman: "John McCormack at his best. Beautiful romance. Beautiful scenes. A picture for young and old."

Father Hayes. "I wish to express my thanks to the management for their kind invitation to be present at the review of 'Song O' My Heart.' I wish to stae I enjoyed it immensely. It came up to my highest expectations."

Mrs. C. M. Patek: "A very fine picture. I enjoyed it very much."

Father O'Connell: "The film was so realistic it made me recall my native country vividly. It was a great source of delight to hear such a masterful artist as John McCormack."

W. H. Gemmell: "To very many of us, John McCormack, by means of the phonograph and radio, is merely a voice, a very beautiful voice. By the wizardy of the camera and new sound-recording developments, in this Irish play we see and hear him in person. His voice comes out as clear and beautiful as if he were standing before us and his acting is excellent. The Irish scenes, the wonderful reception that is accorded him in the large auditorium in New York and the songs he sings on both sides of the ocean, illustrate the power and range of his voice, and thep athos in many of them, especially in Eugene Fields 'Little Boy Blue,' grip the heart.

"Rarely have Brainerd audiences been afforded an opportunity to see such a clean and wholesome play, with a touching love story running through it."

Mayor Frank E. Little: "I want to congratulate the manager of the Paramount teahtre for bringing a picture such as 'Song O' My Heart' to Brainerd. It gives the people an opportunity to hear and see the famous tenor, John McCormack. I consider it of great educational value and one which I feel that both young and old can thoroughly enjoy. There is not a dull moment in it. All Brainerd should see it."

PERFECTS NEW VIBRATIONLESS MOTOR FUEL

A vibrationless motor fuel is the innovation to be introduced here Saturday when the White Eagle Oil Corporation brings out its new Banner Gasoline.

Automotive engineers and fuel chemists have perfected this vibrationless motor fuel after long laboratory and field research.

From a technical engineering standpoint, it has been found that even the finest and smoothest running motors vibrate more or less continuously because of irregular burning of fuel.

It was only in the past year that chemists and engineers centered their attention on motor fuels as possible causes of engine vibration. Their discoveries in refining processes to eliminate vibration are conceded to be one of the most important advances in motor transportation.

Banner Gasoline has met with enthusiastic response from motorists throughout the East since it was introduced several months ago. Now White Eagle brings this product to Western motorists as a winter gasoline built especially to start quickly in cold weather.

TO THE VOTERS OF CROW WING COUNTY

Owing to the size of the County, it may not be possible for me to meet and talk with you personally before election, therefore I am presenting some of the reasons why it is the opinion of many that there should be a change in the present policy in the office of Register of Deeds.

You have probably heard a great deal in former campaigns about the county needing a Tract index with its records. A tract index is simply a book in which each parcel of land is given a column for itself in which is made a notation of any instrument which in any way affects the title to that particular piece of real property, giving the page and book in which the record of the original instrument can be found. With such an index, which serves the same purpose as the index to the contents of a book, any citizen of ordinary intelligence can find the record of any instrument desired as the law intends he should be able to do. In fact, he can abstract his own property or find the title to any piece of property in which he might be interested. I have taken this matter up with the Registers of Deeds of the other counties of the State and learned that in nearly every instance such a record is being kept by the county.

The former register of deeds owned a set of Abstract books which were his personal property and he maintained an index in connection with these books, but in order to compel the people of the County to pay the Abstract company for information and at the same time gain personal knowledge as to any lands that any individual might be interested in or seeking to acquire he failed and refused to keep an index for the County.

It has been stated that it will cost too much to make up such a record. If you will look over the financial statement of the county, you will find that Crow Wing County paid the Deputy Register of Deeds the sum of $1500, as salary last year and the same salary for a good many years past.

What was done to earn that salary? The Register of Deeds office is a fee office, that is, the officer is paid by those who have deeds, mortgages and any other instruments to record. Even the county pays for the recording of its bonds and other instruments, as you will see by the financial statement or the commissioners proceedings. At that, the county buys the books, provides an office and a vault to keep them in.

What, if anything, is the county paying $1500 a year for, if it is not to keep an index of the instruments filed for record. The cost of recording the papers is paid by the people having the instruments recorded.

The fact that the former Register of Deeds refused and neglected to keep such a record, but kept his deputy keeping his personal records with the county paying his salary, is no reason why a start shouldn't be made at this time. The $6000.00 which will be paid out during the coming four-year term of the next Register of Deeds for a deputy would go a long way in paying for the work of making such an index.

I believe that the County should have an index to its records and it will be my policy to secure such an index as speedily as possible should the voters of the County intrust me with the office I seek.

The question is, "Shall Crow Wing County be at the mercy of its officials in the Register of Deeds office or shall the officials be the servants of the people as is the intent of the law?" There is no issue of sympathy or length of service as the law is plain as to the duties of the incumbent in that office. There is no question as to the qualifications of either candidate.

In this connection it has come to my notice that in order to create a prejudice against the undersigned, it has been rumored that my wife would be employed in the office. Will state at this time that she will not be employed in case of my election, as I believe that such position should be given to some worthy wage earner.

I also wish to state that in case of my election I shall give preference to Crow Wing County people for help in the office.

If you believe there should be a change in policies and that the office of Register of Deeds should be conducted for the benefit of the people of the County and not solely for the financial gain of the owners of abstract records, I solicit your support at the General Election, November 4th, and I will appreciate the privilege of serving you.

CARNEY O. PETERSON.

PERFECTS NEW VIBRATIONLESS MOTOR FUEL

A vibrationless motor fuel is the innovation to be introduced here Saturday when the White Eagle Oil Corporation brings out its new Banner Gasoline.

Automotive engineers and fuel chemists have perfected this vibrationless motor fuel after long laboratory and field research.

From a technical engineering standpoint, it has been found that even the finest and smoothest running motors vibrate more or less continuously because of irregular burning of fuel.

It was only in the past year that chemists and engineers centered their attention on motor fuels as possible causes of engine vibration. Their discoveries in refining processes to eliminate vibration are conceded to be one of the most important advances in motor transportation.

Banner Gasoline has met with enthusiastic response from motorists throughout the East since it was introduced several months ago. Now White Eagle brings this product to Western motorists as a winter gasoline built especially to start quickly in cold weather.

TO THE VOTERS OF CROW WING COUNTY

Owing to the size of the County, it may not be possible for me to meet and talk with you personally before election, therefore I am presenting some of the reasons why it is the opinion of many that there should be a change in the present policy in the office of Register of Deeds.

You have probably heard a great deal in former campaigns about the county needing a Tract index with its records. A tract index is simply a book in which each parcel of land is given a column for itself in which is made a notation of any instrument which in any way affects the title to that particular piece of real property, giving the page and book in which the record of the original instrument can be found. With such an index, which serves the same purpose as the index to the contents of a book, any citizen of ordinary intelligence can find the record of any instrument desired as the law intends he should be able to do. In fact, he can abstract his own property or find the title to any piece of property in which he might be interested. I have taken this matter up with the Registers of Deeds of the other counties of the State and learned that in nearly every instance such a record is being kept by the county.

The former register of deeds owned a set of Abstract books which were his personal property and he maintained an index in connection with these books, but in order to compel the people of the County to pay the Abstract company for information and at the same time gain personal knowledge as to any lands that any individual might be interested in or seeking to acquire he failed and refused to keep an index for the County.

It has been stated that it will cost too much to make up such a record. If you will look over the financial statement of the county, you will find that Crow Wing County paid the Deputy Register of Deeds the sum of $1500, as salary last year and the same salary for a good many years past.

What was done to earn that salary? The Register of Deeds office is a fee office, that is, the officer is paid by those who have deeds, mortgages and any other instruments to record. Even the county pays for the recording of its bonds and other instruments, as you will see by the financial statement or the commissioners proceedings. At that, the county buys the books, provides an office and a vault to keep them in.

What, if anything, is the county paying $1500 a year for, if it is not to keep an index of the instruments filed for record. The cost of recording the papers is paid by the people having the instruments recorded.

The fact that the former Register of Deeds refused and neglected to keep such a record, but kept his deputy keeping his personal records with the county paying his salary, is no reason why a start shouldn't be made at this time. The $6000.00 which will be paid out during the coming four-year term of the next Register of Deeds for a deputy would go a long way in paying for the work of making such an index.

I believe that the County should have an index to its records and it will be my policy to secure such an index as speedily as possible should the voters of the County intrust me with the office I seek.

The question is, "Shall Crow Wing County be at the mercy of its officials in the Register of Deeds office or shall the officials be the servants of the people as is the intent of the law?" There is no issue of sympathy or length of service as the law is plain as to the duties of the incumbent in that office. There is no question as to the qualifications of either candidate.

In this connection it has come to my notice that in order to create a prejudice against the undersigned, it has been rumored that my wife would be employed in the office. Will state at this time that she will not be employed in case of my election, as I believe that such position should be given to some worthy wage earner.

I also wish to state that in case of my election I shall give preference to Crow Wing County people for help in the office.

If you believe there should be a change in policies and that the office of Register of Deeds should be conducted for the benefit of the people of the County and not solely for the financial gain of the owners of abstract records, I solicit your support at the General Election, November 4th, and I will appreciate the privilege of serving you.

A Manly Reply

THE following is a copy of a letter written by County Attorney Sullivan to the editor of The Tribune in reply to his attacks made against the investigation of the county road funds, and is so fair and enlightening that we reproduce it in full:

Dear Sir:

I have read the editorials in the issues of the Brainerd Tribune of September 25th and October 2nd, wherein you criticize the conduct of the County Attorney's office.

While you mentioned no names, part of the editorials could only refer to me and part could only refer to Mr. Wieland, my predecessor in office.

The editorials are in your usual style in that they contain no direct statement of what you claim to be wrong or to to be the fact, but instead there are insinuations, inferences, innuendo, assumptions of fact which are false and questions asked which are based on false assumptions. This form of unprincipled attack is difficult to answer because it is difficult to understand just what you profess to believe is wrong.

In your editorials you infer that I am "hiring expensive accountants to look over records on road work." That inference is false. At my request deputy state public examiners are examining the records as to road expenditures and we are together interviewing many persons who have worked upon the roads. These examiners are paid by the State and their work is wholly without cost to the County.

I did not "hire" them, but requested their services and commenced the investigation after I received information which seemed sufficiently authentic to justify such investigation. Because you pretended to be much disturbed about the expense of the investigation, although, apparently, not in the least disturbed about learning whether money has been taken from the County by means of false claims, I shall state that I get no greater salary from the County for my work in this investigation. In fact, I lose, because it has occupied almost all my time since it started and prevents me from doing other work for which I would be paid.

You pretend to be disturbed because this matter developed before election. So am I disturbed for it has prevented me from meeting the voters and making a campaign for election and I realize very well the necessity for making one. Whether you like it or not, I propose, so long as I am County Attorney, to investigate and prosecute criminal frauds against the County, whether it be before or after election. Do you, Mr. Ericson, believe that criminal frauds and grafting of the County's money should be ignored by the County Attorney because he is running for that office?

You infer that I am at fault as the commissioners "must rely on the advice of the County Attorney, whose business it is to check bills and advise the Board on any deals they make." Again you are wrong.

It is the duty of the County Attorney to advise the Board as to the law when requested. It is also his duty to see that claims against the county which are presented to the Board are sworn to as correct, that they are presented in proper form and that the law authorizes the expenditure of county money for the purpose stated in the bill. The County Board has the sole duty of passing upon the question of whether the services or materials named in the bill were in fact rendered or furnished, whether, in fact, they were charged for at a reasonable price or the agreed price, and, in short, whether the claim is correct or not and whether it should be allowed.

What I have just outlined deals with claims presented to the County Board for allowance and payment. Most of the padded and fraudulent claims being investigated were paid under the provisions of Sec. 2570, General Statutes of Minnesota, 1923, which provides that labor claims for road work can be paid by county warrant upon charge of construction. Under the law such claims are not presented to the county board, and therefore, not passed upon by me in any way. The road overseer, superintendent or foreman who signs such a time check should know that the services were rendered at the price set out in the check before he signs it. This method of paying labor on road work has been followed for a long time. The minutes of the Commissioners' meeting held as recently as October 4th, show appropriations of $6,900.00 for twelve different road projects, "to be expended under the supervision of the County Engineer with authority to issue time checks in payment of labor." The board has a legal right to do that if it chooses regardless of what I might think of the wisdom of such a course. The time checks of the County Engineer for labor for such road work will not be, and the law does not require that they should be, presented to me for approval of any kind.

You pretend to be worried because, as you infer, the County Attorney summoned grand juries to investigate liquor cases, where complaints could have been made out by the County Attorney and the county saved the expense of a grand jury. That never happened while I was County Attorney, and the court records clearly show it. I have served as County Attorney for five terms of district court. During that time four grand juries were called. Each time the grand jury was called to consider indictments where the law absolutely required grand jury action. No grand jury was in session over one day. It costs no more to have the grand jury in session for a full day than to have them in session one hour. On one occasion I did present two liquor cases to the grand jury after it had finished the other work. It did not cost the county one cent but did save the expense of a court reporter at the preliminary hearings which the defendants could have demanded had it first been brought in Municipal Court on my complaint.

During Mr. Wieland's first term he did on one occasion keep a grand jury busy one day on liquor cases with the result that sixty-three liquor indictments were returned as that day's work. It was such a record day's work for a grand jury that it attracted the attention of the Associated Press which reported it to the papers of the country. It saved the county considerable money over the expense of preliminary hearings in Municipal Court.

For some years and until recently you were permitted to practice law in Minnesota, and did practice that profession. That being so I believe I may fairly assume that you know the law relative to the presentment of claims to the County Board and the County Attorney's duty in that regard. That you also know that there is no charge to the county when the state public examiner examines county records, and that you know that grand juries must be called to consider certain offenses, and that it costs no more to have the grand jury in session all day than a part of the day. If you do know the law you have deliberately misled your readers. If you didn't know the law you have misled your readers because you did not know what you were writing about. The result is the same.

I hereby request you to run the foregoing letter in the next issue of the Brainerd Tribune as a political display advertisement on my behalf for which I agree to pay you the usual display advertising rate.

Yours truly,
Arthur J. Sullivan,
County Attorney.

The County Attorney

THE DISPATCH favors the election of Arthur J. Sullivan as county attorney because he has rendered exceptionally fine service in that position the past three years, and believes he should be rewarded for those services by continuing him in office. This is no reflection on his opponent, City Attorney Harry Fullerton, who is a fine Brainerd boy and has served well as city attorney, but The Dispatch believes where an official has rendered superior service he should be continued in that position.

Marriage Statistics

ACCORDING to figures compiled by the Department of Commerce there were more marriages performed in 1929 than in 1928, there being an increase of 4.2 per cent. Divorces, however, also showed an increase in 1929 over 1928, as well as marriages annulled.

Because of numerous requests for the information, the relative number of marriages to each divorce has been computed. In 1929, for the United States as a whole, 6.1 marriages for each divorce were reported, as against 6.0 in 1928.

Council Protest on Mill: Raise

In what floor?

In the protest dated September 7th, Mr. W. J. Hall expresses his opinion that the feed being cheapest in the history of the county, labor cheap and the hay plenty, so the milk should be lower rather than increased.

According to Mr. Hall's opinion, he expresses himself as to what favor he does the public, so if he compares the prices in milk, why not compare the other products raised by the farmer—wheat, rye, corn, pork, beef and poultry. And if everything is cheap, why not raise the question regarding the price of bread? Comparing the price as it used to be at five cents per loaf, why not kick about the price of 12 cents today? Does the farmer get it, or did they get a price for what they produced? No, but they pay the price when they buy it. Does Mr. Hall realize that the farmer is a part of his piano business? So why jump on the farmer and compare the piano with a cow and radio with a horse, etc.

As to patronizing the city working men with statement of many babies in this city will suffer for reason of lack of milk, it is true, but he must consider that even many mothers are suffering for lack of proper food and not enough of it, which is dangerous to the health. Why? Did Mr. Hall raise any question in regard to Brainerd labor—if there are any jobs here should be for the men of this city? No, if it was the jobs were let out to the outside contractors, and laborers, so that the laborer of this city, goes without, or if he does, he works the sweat of his brow for wages slashed down so that there is not enough to go around for his family.

Even now did Mr. Hall raise any question as to aid the unemployment? No! So in this case, the farmers of this county and the working men of this city shall remember this: we're to trade his dollar when they are able to spare it. Mr. Hall is taking a great step in favor of the public. Let them walk on the street and the friend drive a car on the sidewalk.

Dear Sir:

May I ask a few questions through your paper in regards to Amendment No. 3.

Does this amendment mean that the federal land for exchange shall be land of this state or does it mean that out state lands can be traded for federal lands of other states even though they be of very high test?

If there are a few pieces of state lands lying in a federal reserve why can not this amendment be made to cover such designated lands and then when teh trade was made it would be no more a law?

Why should this amendment No. 3 cover so much territory and be of such long life—and the last do you think there are some axes to grind.

DAN CHORD.

Editors Note: The answer to Mr. Chord's questions is given in a news story to be found on page 7 of today's issue.

CONCERNING THE JUDGESHIP

October 22, 1930

Editor, Brainerd Daily Dispatch,
Brainerd, Minnesota.
Dear Sir:

Speaking after me at the League of Women Voters' meeting in Brainerd last evening, Mr. Donald Ryan, in behalf of his father, made certain arguments which I feel should not be permitted to go without comment.

1. He contended that the three southern counties (meaning, I presume, Aitkin, Cass and Crow Wing) have one judge, and the six northern counties have two. A glance at the map will show that Park Rapids, in Hubbard county, where Judge Wright resides, is well in the southern half of the district. The four southern counties, with a population of 66,000, an area of 4,200,000 acres, a valuation of $31,400,000, with 743 days of court in the past 5 years, have for 22 years had two judges. The five northern counties, Beltrami, Clearwater, Itasca, Koochiching and Lake of the Woods, with 76,000 people, 7,600,000 acres, $43,000,000 valuation, 819 days of court in the same five years, have never had more than one judge. All three judges are in the western half: the eastern half has never had one. A large part of Aitkin and Cass is nearer Grand Rapids than Brainerd. Walker, the county seat of Cass, is only 24 miles from Park Rapids, 32 miles from Bemidji, where Judge Torrance resides. Aitkin village is only 57 miles from Grand Rapids. Brainerd, via Backus, is only some 76 miles from Park Rapids. For 43 years we in Itasca county have had no judge residing nearer than Bemidji, 73 miles from Grand Rapids.

Is there any justice in the claim that it is unfair for Itasca to seek a resident judge now?

2. He mentioned telling one of his clients of the extra expense to him of his attorney's going elsewhere on legal business when court is not in session in Brainerd. In Brainerd, in Aitkin, in Walker, in Park Rapids, all nearer (or practically as near) Brainerd than Bemidji is to Grand Rapids, there are eight terms of court per year, spread out through nearly as many months. Would the rare inconvenience of having to go to one of these other points be as great as the inconveniences we of Itasca have been subjected to in the past 43 years? Will you lose sight of the fact that Judge Ryan has been away from home most of the time since his appointment? And does his son imply that the Judge would act in a matter in which the Ryan firm are attorneys, or that the opposing party and his counsel would consent to it. Isn't it a fact, indeed, that, with respect to the considerable amount of court work in which the Ryan firm appear or may appear, the prospects of their clients and their adversaries having to go to distant points in the district (even on occasions when the local judge is holding court at home) will be increased, rather than minimized, by the retention of the recently appointed judge?

3. He implied that his father is handicapped because he must hold court throughout the district, and has no time for politics. Can any one sincerely claim that the appointment, made so early in order that this very thing should be possible, worked to the disadvantage of the appointee? That when my opponent, immediately after the appointment, requested Judge Wright, as presiding judge, to assign him to as many terms in different counties as possible, he did so only with the lofty idea of being of the greatest possible public service? Can any one who has attended at any of those terms concede that no political opportunities have existed, or that any have been overlooked?

4. He called attention to the fact that I was ineligible for the appointment when it was made, because a member of the state senate, and asked if I would have been satisfied if some one else had been appointed, from Brainerd or Grand Rapids or some other place in the district. If Judge McClenahan had announced that he would not be a candidate for re-election, as we now know he preferred to do instead of retiring when he did the voters would have chosen his successor themselves this fall on the merits, without one candidate having the advantage or the handicap, as you prefer, of being the incumbent. I was and am eligible to be a candidate for the term commencing next January.

But, passing that, I answer Mr. Ryan's query readily and unhesitatingly, Yes. If the appointment had been made after a fair opportunity to the people of the district to be heard, and after fair consideration of their recommendations, the result would have been acceded to, not only by me, but, I believe, by all the people of the district. This was the case when Judge Torrance was appointed in 1927, and elected without opposition in 1928.

I was not eager to seek the office this year, was determined at least to await information of Judge McClenahan's plans before doing so. When I announced my candidacy in February, after the appointment was made, I did so reluctantly, and very largely because of protests from all over the district against the governor's unprecedented action, and because my brother-lawyers and neighbors in Itasca county urged my entering this contest.

I have faith that the people of Brainerd and of Crow Wing county will consider that matters of principle are involved; that they outweigh the over-estimated inconveniences of Brainerd's temporarily having no resident judge.

Very truly yours,
ALFRED L. THWING.

According to Doctor Swierat, the two walked into his office, and after one complained of an ailment, the other flourished a gun and ordered him to raise his hands.

Instead, Doctor Swierat said, he seized a chair and administered such a trouncing to the men they dashed through the door and escaped.

A Manly Reply

THE following is a copy of a letter written by County Attorney Sullivan to the editor of The Tribune in reply to his attacks made against the investigation of the county road funds, and is so fair and enlightening that we reproduce it in full:

Dear Sir:

I have read the editorials in the issues of the Brainerd Tribune of September 25th and October 2nd, wherein you criticize the conduct of the County Attorney's office.

While you mentioned no names, part of the editorials could only refer to me and part could only refer to Mr. Wieland, my predecessor in office.

The editorials are in your usual style in that they contain no direct statement of what you claim to be wrong or to to be the fact, but instead there are insinuations, inferences, innuendo, assumptions of fact which are false and questions asked which are based on false assumptions. This form of unprincipled attack is difficult to answer because it is difficult to understand just what you profess to believe is wrong.

In your editorials you infer that I am "hiring expensive accountants to look over records on road work." That inference is false. At my request deputy state public examiners are examining the records as to road expenditures and we are together interviewing many persons who have worked upon the roads. These examiners are paid by the State and their work is wholly without cost to the County.

I did not "hire" them, but requested their services and commenced the investigation after I received information which seemed sufficiently authentic to justify such investigation. Because you pretended to be much disturbed about the expense of the investigation, although, apparently, not in the least disturbed about learning wnether money has been taken from the County by means of false claims, I shall state that I get no greater salary from the County for my work in this investigation. In fact, I lose, because it has occupied almost all my time since it started and prevents me from doing other work for which I would be paid.

You pretend to be disturbed because this matter developed before election. So am I disturbed for it has prevented me from meeting the voters and making a campaign for election and I realize very well the necessity for making one. Whether you like it or not, I propose, so long as I am County Attorney, to investigate and prosecute criminal frauds against the County, whether it be before or after election. Do you, Mr. Ericson, believe that criminal frauds and grafting of the County's money should be ignored by the County Attorney because he is running for that office?

You infer that I am at fault as the commissioners "must rely on the advice of the County Attorney, whose business it is to check bills and advise the Board on any deals they make." Again you are wrong.

It is the duty of the County Attorney to advise the Board as to the law when requested. It is also his duty to see that claims against the county which are presented to the Board are sworn to as correct, that they are presented in proper form and that the law authorizes the expenditure of county money for the purpose stated in the bill. The County Board has the sole duty of passing upon the question of whether the services or materials named in the bill were in fact rendered or furnished, whether, in fact, they were charged for at a reasonable price or the agreed price, and, in short, whether the claim is correct or not and whether it should be allowed.

What I have just outlined deals with claims presented to the County Board for allowance and payment. Most of the padded and fraudulent claims being investigated were paid under the provisions of Sec. 2570, General Statutes of Minnesota, 1923, which provides that labor claims for road work can be paid by county warrant upon charge of construction. Under the law such claims are not presented to the county board, and therefore, not passed upon by me in any way. The road overseer, superintendent or foreman who signs such a time check should know that the services were rendered at the price set out in the check before he signs it. This method of paying labor on road work has been followed for a long time. The minutes of the Commissioners' meeting held as recently as October 4th, show appropriations of $6,900.00 for twelve different road projects, "to be expended under the supervision of the County Engineer with authority to issue time checks in payment of labor." The board has a legal right to do that if it chooses regardless of what I might think of the wisdom of such a course. The time checks of the County Engineer for labor for such road work will not be, and the law does not require that they should be, presented to me for approval of any kind.

You pretend to be worried because, as you infer, the County Attorney summoned grand juries to investigate liquor cases, where complaints could have been made out by the County Attorney and the county saved the expense of a grand jury. That never happened while I was County Attorney, and the court records clearly show it. I have served as County Attorney for five terms of district court. During that time four grand juries were called. Each time the grand jury was called to consider indictments where the law absolutely required grand jury action. No grand jury was in session over one day. It costs no more to have the grand jury in session for a full day than to have them in session one hour. On one occasion I did present two liquor cases to the grand jury after it had finished the other work. It did not cost the county one cent but did save the expense of a court reporter at the preliminary hearings which the defendants could have demanded had it first been brought in Municipal Court on my complaint.

During Mr. Wieland's first term he did on one occasion keep a grand jury busy one day on liquor cases with the result that sixty-three liquor indictments were returned as that day's work It was such a record day's work for a grand jury that it attracted the attention of the Associated Press which reported it to the papers of the country. It saved the county considerable money over the expense of preliminary hearings in Municipal Court.

For some years and until recently you were permitted to practice law in Minnesota, and did practice that profession. That being so I believe I may fairly assume that you know the law relative to the presentment of claims to the County Board and the County Attorney's duty in that regard. That you also know that there is no charge to the county when the state public examiner examines county records, and that you know that grand juries must be called to consider certain offenses, and that it costs no more to have the grand jury in session all day than a part of the day. If you do know the law you have deliberately misled your readers. If you didn't know the law you have misled your readers because you did not know what you were writing about. The result is the same.

I hereby request you to run the foregoing letter in the next issue of the Brainerd Tribune as a political display advertisement on my behalf for which I agree to pay you the usual display advertising rate.

Yours truly,
Arthur J. Sullivan,
County Attorney.

The County Attorney

THE DISPATCH favors the election of Arthur J. Sullivan as county attorney because he has rendered exceptionally fine service in that position the past three years, and believes he should be rewarded for those services by continuing him in office. This is no reflection on his opponent, City Attorney Harry Fullerton, who is a fine Brainerd boy and has served well as city attorney, but The Dispatch believes where an official has rendered superior service he should be continued in that position.

Marriage Statistics

ACCORDING to figures compiled by the Department of Commerce there were more marriages performed in 1929 than in 1928, there being an increase of 4.2 per cent. Divorces, however, also showed an increase in 1929 over 1928, as well as marriages annulled.

Because of numerous requests for the information, the relative number of marriages to each divorce has been computed. In 1929, for the United States as a whole, 6.1 marriages for each divorce were reported, as against 6.0 in 1928.

Council Protest on Mill: Raise

In what floor?

In the protest dated September 7th, Mr. W. J. Hall expresses his opinion that the feed being cheapest in the history of the county, labor cheap and the hay plenty, so the milk should be lower rather than increased.

According to Mr. Hall's opinion, he expresses himself as to what favor he does the public, so if he compares the prices in milk, why not compare the other products raised by the farmer—wheat, rye, corn, pork, beef and poultry. And if everything is cheap, why not raise the question regarding the price of bread? Comparing the price as it used to be at five cents per loaf, why not kick about the price of 12 cents today? Does the farmer get it, or did they get a price for what they produced? No, but they pay the price when they buy it. Does Mr. Hall realize that the farmer is a part of his piano business? So why jump on the farmer and compare the piano with a cow and radio with a horse, etc.

As to patronizing the city working men with statement of many babies in this city will suffer for reason of lack of milk, it is true, but he must consider that even many mothers are suffering for lack of proper food and not enough of it, which is dangerous to the health. Why? Did Mr. Hall raise any question in regard to Brainerd labor—if there are any jobs here should be for the men of this city? No, if it was the jobs were let out to the outside contractors, and laborers, so that the laborer of this city, goes without, or if he does, he works the sweat of his brow for wages slashed down so that there is not enough to go around for his family.

Even now did Mr. Hall raise any question as to aid the unemployment? No! So in this case, the farmers of this county and the working men of this city shall remember this: we're to trade his dollar when they are able to spare it. Mr. Hall is taking a great step in favor of the public. Let them walk on the street and the friend drive a car on the sidewalk.

Brainerd Dispatch.
Dear Sir:

May I ask a few questions through your paper in regards to Amendment No. 3.

Does this amendment mean that the federal land for exchange shall be land of this state or does it mean that out state lands can be traded for federal lands of other states even though they be of very high test?

If there are a few pieces of state lands lying in a federal reserve why can not this amendment be made to cover such designated lands and then when teh trade was made it would be no more a law?

Why should this amendment No. 3 cover so much territory and be of such long life—and the last do you think there are some axes to grind.

DAN CHORD.

Editors Note: The answer to Mr. Chord's questions is given in a news story to be found on page 7 of today's issue.

CONCERNING THE JUDGESHIP

October 22, 1930

Editor, Brainerd Daily Dispatch,
Brainerd, Minnesota.
Dear Sir:

Speaking after me at the League of Women Voters' meeting in Brainerd last evening, Mr. Donald Ryan, in behalf of his father, made certain arguments which I feel should not be permitted to go without comment.

1. He contended that the three southern counties (meaning, I presume, Aitkin, Cass and Crow Wing) have one judge, and the six northern counties have two. A glance at the map will show that Park Rapids, in Hubbard county, where Judge Wright resides, is well in the southern half of the district. The four southern counties, with a population of 66,000, an area of 4,200,000 acres, a valuation of $31,400,000, with 743 days of court in the past 5 years, have for 22 years had two judges. The five northern counties, Beltrami, Clearwater, Itasca, Koochiching and Lake of the Woods, with 76,000 people, 7,600,000 acres, $43,000,000 valuation, 819 days of court in the same five years, have never had more than one judge. All three judges are in the western half: the eastern half has never had one. A large part of Aitkin and Cass is nearer Grand Rapids than Brainerd. Walker, the county seat of Cass, is only 24 miles from Park Rapids, 32 miles from Bemidji, where Judge Torrance resides. Aitkin village is only 57 miles from Grand Rapids. Brainerd, via Backus, is only some 76 miles from Park Rapids. For 43 years we in Itasca county have had no judge residing nearer than Bemidji, 73 miles from Grand Rapids.

Is there any justice in the claim that it is unfair for Itasca to seek a resident judge now?

2. He mentioned telling one of his clients of the extra expense to him of his attorney's going elsewhere on legal business when court is not in session in Brainerd. In Brainerd, in Aitkin, in Walker, in Park Rapids, all nearer (or practically as near) Brainerd than Bemidji is to Grand Rapids, there are eight terms of court per year, spread out through nearly as many months. Would the rare inconvenience of having to go to one of these other points be as great as the inconveniences we of Itasca have been subjected to in the past 43 years? Will you lose sight of the fact that Judge Ryan has been away from home most of the time since his appointment? And does his son imply that the Judge would act in a matter in which the Ryan firm are attorneys, or that the opposing party and his counsel would consent to, it Isn't it a fact, indeed, that, with respect to the considerable amount of court work in which the Ryan firm appear or may appear, the prospects of their clients and their adversaries having to go to distant points in the district (even on occasions when the local judge is holding court at home) will be increased, rather than minimized, by the retention of the recently appointed judge?

3. He implied that his father is handicapped because he must hold court throughout the district, and has no time for politics. Can any one sincerely claim that the appointment, made so early in order that this very thing should be possible, worked to the disadvantage of the appointee? That when my opponent, immediately after the appointment, requested Judge Wright, as presiding judge, to assign him to as many terms in different counties as possible, he did so only with the lofty idea of being of the greatest possible public service? Can any one who has attended at any of those terms concede that no political opportunities have existed, or that any have been overlooked?

4. He called attention to the fact that I was ineligible for the appointment when it was made, because a member of the state senate, and asked if I would have been satisfied if some one else had been appointed, from Brainerd or Grand Rapids or some other place in the district. If Judge McClenahan had announced that he would not be a candidate for re-election, as we now [illegible] referred to do ,instead of retiring when he did the voters would have chosen his successor themselves this fall on the merits, without one candidate having the advantage or the handicap, as you prefer, of being the incumbent. I was and am eligible to be a candidate for the term commencing next January.

But, passing that, I answer Mr. Ryan's query readily and unhesitatingly, Yes. If the appointment had been made after a fair opportunity to the people of the district to be heard, and after fair consideration of their recommendations, the result would have been acceded to, not only by me, but, I believe, by all the people of the district. This was the case when Judge Torrance was appointed in 1927, and elected without opposition in 1928.

I was not eager to seek the office this year, was determined at least to await information of Judge McClenahan's plans before doing so. When I announced my candidacy in February, after the appointment was made, I did so reluctantly, and very largely because of protests from all over the district against the governor's unprecedented action, and because my brother-lawyers and neighbors in Itasca county urged my entering this contest.

I have faith that the people of Brainerd and of Crow Wing county will consider that matters of principle are involved; that they outweigh the over - estimated inconveniences of Brainerd's temporarily having no resident judge.

Very truly yours,
ALFRED L. THWING.

Husky Doctor Trounces Two Youthful Holdups

Buffalo, N. Y.—The combination of Dr. John V. Swierat and a folding chair was too much for two youthful holdup men, and they fled without gaining their objective.

According to Doctor Swierat, the two walked into his office, and after one complained of an ailment, the other flourished a gun and ordered him to raise his hands.

Instead, Doctor Swierat said, he seized a chair and administered such a trouncing to the men they dashed through the door and escaped.

Farmer Gets Aid From Sky; Meteorite, $650

Heber Springs, Ark.—Aid from the skies during the drought came to Julian Bailey, farmer living northwest of here, but it differed from any he had hoped for, and it enabled him to sell a product that few farmers take to market.

The heavenly assistance took the form of a 37 pound meteorite which fell on his farm. Bailey sold it to a Rochester (N. Y.) firm for $650.

2 RUM BOATS AND LIQUOR CARGOES TAKEN

LIQUOR SEIZED NEAR WATCH HILL, R. I., VALUED AT $100,000

4 COAST GUARD DESTROYERS RAKE RUM FLEET WITH MACHINE GUN FIRE

Watch Hill, R. I., Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—Two rum boats and liquor cargoes valued at $100,000 were captured by four coast guard destroyers after the rum runners had been trapped and raked with machine gun fire at the mouth of Narragansett Bay today.

One of the craft captured was the 45 foot speedboat Helen of Newport, whose crew beached her on Napatree Point near old Fort Mansfield and escaped afoot. Coast guards reported having seen seven or eight men leave this boat, on which 1,000 cases of liquor having a retail value of $50 a case were found.

The second boat seized was the 82 foot speedboat Purblo, recently built at Mystic, Conn. This craft started to run into the shallow waters of Stonington, Conn., harbor, but she finally hove to when her crew apparently realized that escape was impossible. The Purblo also carried 1,000 cases, having a similar retail value.

ARMED POSSES AND FARMERSS SEARCH FOR GEORGE DWERNCHUK

THE KILLINGS TOOK PLACE AT SMOKY LAKE, 60 MILES FROM EDMONTON, ALTA.

Edmonton, Alta, Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—Armed posses and farmers today continued their search for George Dwernchuk sought in connection with the slaying of four persons and the wounding of a fifth at Smoky Lake, 60 miles from here.

Provincial police doubted whether Dwernchuk could be captured immediately as he had several hours start on his pursuers.

The dead were John Walanski, his wife, and their invalid daughter, Mary, 16, and John Darichuk, neighbor of the Walanskis. Mrs. Anna Walanski, mother of the slain woman, was wounded and little hope was held out for her recovery.

The victims were slain with a 12-gauge shotgun believed to have been one borrowed by Dwernchuk the day before the killings.

St. Paul, Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—Handling of finances by school district No. 61, Crow Wing county, were criticized today by A. R. Johnson, chief state examiner.

W. W. SPENCER TO FACE MANN ACT CHARGES

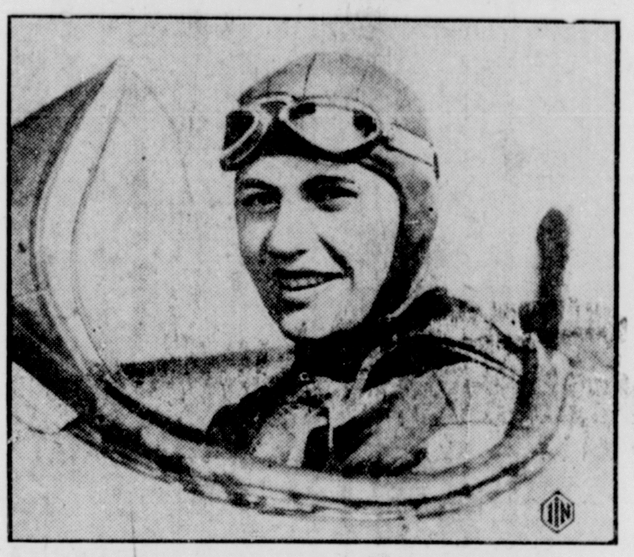

Los Angeles, Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—W. W. Spencer, 49, wealthy Minneapolis, Minn., wholesale grocer, was en route to his home city today in custody of a police official to face Mann act charges filed against him by his wife.

Spencer was arrested here in company with a 21-year-old marathon dancer, Mrs. Jerry Dunn, with whom he was alleged to have journeyed from here to Minneapolis and return. Shortly after their arrival here Spencer was arrested on a telegraphic warrant sworn to by Mrs. Spencer in Minneapolis.

The girl was held in technical custody. She told district attorney's investigators she will resist attempts to extradite her to the Minnesota city.

PROWLERS RANSACK MURPHY APARTMENT

Escape With $65 in Cash While Store Owner and Wife Attend Theatre Last Evening

Burglars Use Glass Cutter to Enter, Leave Apartment in Confusion

Using a glass cutter to effect their entrance, burglars ransacked the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Murphy, at 704½ Front street last evening, escaping after leaving the rooms in a turmoil with $65 in cash.

A complete checkup is being made today to determine if anything else was stolen.

The time the burglars selected to ply their trade is definitely set at between 7:30 p. m .and 9 p. m. since the house was unoccupied at that time, Mr. and Mrs. Murphy being at the theatre.

The prowlers stole $35 in cash belonging to Mrs. Murphy and $30 in cash from a pocketbook owned by Pearl Van Horn, a servant. They forced open a jewel box containing Mrs. Murphy's jewelry but did not take any of the contents.

The apartment was in a state of confusion on the return of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy. Dresser drawers were left open, their contents scattered about while household furniture had been moved.

The burglars entered by cutting a piece of glass from the door and reaching inside and turning the knob.

Mr. Murphy is proprietor of the dry goods store at 704 Front street, being on first floor under his apartment.

Police have assigned investigators to the case.

LAND EXCHANGE TAKEN TO VOTERS

Adoption of Amendment to Consolidate State Forest Lands in National Tracts Rests With People

Conservation of the natural resources has been an important question in the primary election last spring and the general election campaign which ends with the election next week.

In addition to making a choice of candidates for the various offices, electors will have an amendment dealing with conservation on which to vote. This is amendment number three, the last on the ballot. It authorizes the exchange of state lands for lands of the United States. The purpose of this amendment is to consolidate the State Forest lands in the Superior and Chipewa National Forests. There are a number of townships in which the state now owns the majority of the land. In most townships the state owns a few tracts of from 40 to 640 acres.

Under the proposed amendment these scattered tracts can be exchanged for United States land and the state lands consolidated into solid blocks of a township or more.

This conservation measure will aid in management and protection, enabling the State Forest Service, which has supervision of the State Forests, to make better use of the land.

Production and management of timber growth cannot be profitably accomplished on areas less than a township in size, which is 23,040 acres. From one to eight townships make ideal uints for the best management.

Protection, from fire and insect damage, as well as theft of timber, is the second important consideration in land consolidation. Fire prevention and insect control are possible by methods of logging operations, in which manner of disposing slash is important. The isolated settler, with his land clearing fires, is a constant fire hazard. This hazard will be decreased when the state owns and controls solid blocks of State Forest land.

Timber theft, often unintentional because of unknown corners and boundary lines, is one of the questions which this consolidation measure will abate. It is physically and economically impossible to locate the corners and blaze the boundary lines of every 40 acre tract or even the larger tracts. When these small tracts are consolidated into large solid blocks the four corners and boundary lines can be permanently established and marked. It would be impossible for a timber operator to cross the boundary of state land without knowing it.

When you vote on Tuesday, November 4, remember to cast your ballot on Amendment No. 3. Vote as you decide, but vote.

PROWLERS RANSACK MURPHY APARTMENT

Burglars Use Glass Cutter to Enter, Leave Apartment in Confusion

Using a glass cutter to effect their entrance, burglars ransacked the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Murphy, at 704½ Front street last evening, escaping after leaving the rooms in a turmoil with $65 in cash.

A complete checkup is being made today to determine if anything else was stolen.

The time the burglars selected to ply their trade is definitely set at between 7:30 p. m .and 9 p. m. since the house was unoccupied at that time, Mr. and Mrs. Murphy being at the theatre.

The prowlers stole $35 in cash belonging to Mrs. Murphy and $30 in cash from a pocketbook owned by Pearl Van Horn, a servant. They forced open a jewel box containing Mrs. Murphy's jewelry but did not take any of the contents.

The apartment was in a state of confusion on the return of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy. Dresser drawers were left open, their contents scattered about while household furniture had been moved.

The burglars entered by cutting a piece of glass from the door and reaching inside and turning the knob.

Mr. Murphy is proprietor of the dry goods store at 704 Front street, being on first floor under his apartment.

Police have assigned investigators to the case.

"LAST DITCH" STANDS TO BE MADE SATURDAY

PURDUE BEATEN BY MICHIGAN 14 TO 13 IN OPENING CONFERENCE GAME

STILL HAS CHAMPIONSHIP ASPIRATIONS, MAY DEFEAT WISCONSIN

By DIXON STEWART
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Oct. 24.—Purdue's Boilermakers, 1929 Big Ten champions, and Bob Zuppke's green but dangerous Illini were keyed today for "last ditch" stands which may upset current calculations on the 1930 western conference race.

Purdue, beaten by Michigan, 14-13, in its opening conference game, still has championship aspirations and can remain a dangerous contender by defeating Wisconsin in Saturday's homecoming contest at Ross-Ade Stadium, Lafayette.

Although four teams — Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Northwestern—are unbeaten in Big Ten competition, the Boilermakers play more conference games than their rivals and can retain the title on a percentage basis if no contender completes the season with a clean slate. Purdue has six conference games, one more than any other team.

Illinois entertains little hope of winning the title, but the Illini are proud of their record as "upset" producers and hope to scramble the race by defeating Michigan and shattering their traditional rivals' hopes of a conference championship.

Purdue and Wisconsin apparently are equally matched, although Purdue already has sustained one defeat. Wisconsin has piled up 142 points in four games against Lawrence, Carleton, Chicago and Pennsylvania, leading the west in scoring.

Wisconsin's great showing against Pennsylvania has won the Badgers recognition as one of the west's most powerful squads, but Purdue also boasts a powerful line and a capable backfield. A capacity crowd of 30,000 is expected in Ross-Ade Stadium.

Games between Wisconsin and Purdue are traditionally close and the 1930 contest should be no exception to the rule. Both squads are in top condition and with defeat certain to eliminate the loser from championship consideration, Coaches Kizer of Purdue and Thistlethwaite of Wisconsin are prepared to "shoot the works" for victory.

Only three other games are scheduled. Ohio State, Minnesota and Iowa have open dates with the remaining schools playing intersectional games.

Northwestern meets Centre in a "breather" prior to resuming a strenuous Big Ten schedule while Chicago's weak team meets an equally unsuccessful opponent in Mississippi.

Indiana travels to Dallas, Texas, for a game with Southern Methodist University which probably will leave Texas fans with an unfavorable impression of the calibre of Big Ten football.

GAME OF CHARGE, COUNTER-CHARGE, BEGINNING EARLY

LAMENTING MANY YOUNG MEN HAVE BEEN DOING AND DYING FOR DOLLARS

PROTESTS FROM RIVAL COACHES REFLECT SERIOUSLY ON TRUE AMATEUR SPIRIT

By HENRY McELMORE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Oct. 24.—The game of charge and counter-charge in regard to professional aspects of college football has begun two months earlier than usual.

It is the custom to wait until the last whistle has sounded over a December gridiron before lamenting the fact that many of the young men have been doing and dying for dollars instead of for dear old Dalyrymple.

Nor is it necessary this year to await a report from trained investigators sent out by the Carnegie Foundation. From rival coaches and even from players themselves have come a number of protests reflecting seriously on the true amateur spirit.

Two of the these outbursts came yesterday — the first from Columbia, Mo., involving alleged recruiting of athletics in the Big Six conference, the second from Washington, D. C., where five members of the George Washington University freshmen team were suspended from all participation in the school's athletics. The suspension followed an "insurrection" at which the players were said to have demanded salaries, free tuition, and board for their athletic services.

The Big Six controversy centers in Jim Bausch, Kansas backfield star, who has been under fire since he left the University of Wichita for the University of Kansas. University of Missouri officials made a vigorous protest of Bausch's eligibility and "athletics loans" made to him, and planned to present them to a conference committee which meets at Columbia today.

Bausch, in addition to being a star football player, is a salesman for a Kansas life insurance company headed by a Kansas alumnus.

The reported behavior of the George Washington freshmen marked a new high spot in frankness, if not in tact. Their suspension by the athletic director was upheld by Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university.

Two other disturbing incidents, though not connected with professionalism, have occurred during the past few days. In Philadelphia, Rolf Carlsten, University of Pennsylvania backfield ace, was ordered to turn in his uniform by Head Coach Lud Wray. Carlsten was among the players accused of "indifference" during the Wisconsin game last Saturday which Penn lost.

The second disturbing incident took place at Ogelthorpe University in Atlanta where Muddy Adams, guard on the first eleven, was dismissed from the university after authorities had investigated alleged wine-making activities in school dormitories.

Myth Exploded

The widely credited possibility of ships becoming embedded in the weeds of the Sargasso sea, and being unable to escape was disproved by the expedition of the Michael Sars under the direction of Sir John Murray in 1910, which found the surface covered with weeds only in patches, not continuously. The Beebe expedition later verified this statement.

"JUDY" By Winifred Van Duzer

PEGGY ARCHER would have preferred her daughter, Judith, to be a little more carefree and frivolous, instead of a purposeful and sensible young woman. There was, however, a lighter side to Judith's nature—one that loved life and romance. Could her mother have seen her capering through dance steps in the seclusion of her classroom, she would have held a different opinion of her daughter. But the responsibility of supporting her mother by teaching school, following her father's death, causes Judy to curb pleasure. She dislikes men. An old friend, Captain Charley Marceau, persuades her to book passage for her mother and herself for a cruise on his ship "Mokawk." She meets Kit Camp, the ship's wireless operator.

CHAPTER V.

JUDY asked no questions about the boxes and bundles the station taxi man left all over the hall. But she did learn that the sports dress would be a three-piece suit, almond green, and not plain at all, what with a pleated skirt and a scarf bordered by gold and salmon pink. She admitted that the colors were pretty, but objected that it did not seem durable.

Peggy giggled. Pretended to be helplessly amused. "Let's be frivolous for once, Judy. Forget next season and next month. Squander today. Grow butterfly wings. . . . Care to see the rest of your things tonight?"

"Ummm——"

"Tomorrow, then." But Peggy did not mention the matter and Judy would not admit that she was interested enough to speak of it first. And since Peggy insisted upon taking care of all the packing herself they were somewhere off the coast of Maine before Judy suspected the truth about her new wardrobe. Then it was too late for anything to be done.

They were sailing on the Mohawk's first excursion cruise of the season. And by Friday noon the trunk was packed and sent away and Peggy was having a shampoo and wave and massage and manicure in her room. But Judy got out, Hannibal, and in spite of the knocking engine, drove ten miles to a movie theatre which was showing the storm at sea.

Peggy worried about a dozen things over night. Supposing it should rain tomorrow? Supposing they should miss the ferry? Miss the train—the boat? Supposing they lost their tickets? Supposing the trunk didn't arrive safely?

"Do hush up, Mother. There isn't as much hard luck as you can think of."

"But I've got a feeling we'll be late."

They were not late. The sun shone and their trunk was carried aboard just as the taxi put them down at the end of a shifting, chattering line waiting to board the ship.

Judy sat on the deck and watched. Color. Movement. Noise. Laughter. Kisses.

Dozen of times she had been the center of scenes like this. But it always was in that shadowy world where the other Judy lived; always it was the other Judy who tripped up gangplanks, her arms filled with flowers, laughing, waving, calling good-byes. The other Judy who wrapped herself in rainbows, trod on sparkles, wore stars in her hair.

Judy herself knew that she looked severe and uninteresting, rather school-teacherish in spite of the almond green suit and the soft little almond green hat Peggy had bought to match. Tortoise-rimmed spectacles—nose gone shiny since she wouldn't use her vanity in public—hair too tight behind her ears.

And she tried to tell herself that all the scramble—the good-byes, the kisses, even the tears—that all of it was silly. She tried to feel dignified and disapproving as the band played "Aloha," and the "Mohawk" began to move slowly out into the harbor, pennants flying, confetti blowing, colored streamers winding over the river.

But she felt lonely instead.

Then the harbor winds were in her face, wrapping her in their strong, cool arms, whispering at her ears. New York was drawing away — growing blurred like a scene in a dream. Now she could make out Sea Gate. Well, they were going. . . .

A young man loitered by, touched his cap, gave her a half inquiring smile. "Well—think you'll like it?"

She remembered Peggy with a little twinge of premonition. Ought to know better than leave her to herself; something always happened when she did. Something to do with elderly and fatuous gentlemen. . . .

The gentleman this time was middle-aged and gray-haired and pinky-faced, and he was in the chair next to Peggy's, settled with an air of permanency and satisfaction. And Peggy looked very little and young and coquettish tucked into a robe with a blue scarf twisted about her head, her hands making small, fluttery movements.

Why couldn't Peggy be more dignified? Starting right in the way she acted with old Peter Bontell . . . Judy's teeth clicked; her chin raised sharply; the spectacles were very accusing with the afternoon sun striking on their lenses.

Still there were plenty of other couples not being exactly dignified. Judy had to admit this. Young men and young women, and men and women not so young. They were pairing off. Later she learned that the pairs would shift rapidly for a few hours and finally everybody would settle down in twos.

A young man loitered by, touched his cap, gave her a half inquiring smile. "Well, think you'll like it?"

"No!" The tone she used with little Roy Varman.

The young man muttered "Gosh!" and fled.

Then a tall figure came along the deck, strolling with a relaxed air, hat in hand, gazing out to sea. Wavy brown hair stirred by the wind, half smiling lips parted over marvelously white, marvelously even teeth.

His eyes were green like the sea where waves are deep.

Judy caught her breath. Heat wrapped her throat, crept up her cheeks, circled her forehead. Oh outrageous! Never in her life had she blushed before, and here she stood like a lummox staring and trying to swallow the lump in her throat because a man was passing, because he would speak to her, perhaps.

She put her arm on the rail, tried to turn away. No use, though. He held her fascinated gaze as he came nearer, swinging his hat, moving in a jaunty, carefree way.

"How—how do you do?" She said it in the instant his glance flicked across her face. But the words ran together in a jumble and were lost in the whooshing of the wind. He sauntered on without really seeing her at all.

Now she could turn, lean over carelessly, look at the waves cutting along the side of the ship. They looked solid, very firm, as if they had been carved from crystal. He didn't see her. Didn't know she was there.

She had thought about him; let her imagination run wild. Young thing sitting aloft like a god on a throne listening to the talk of men borne on the wings of wind. Fingers at the very pulse of life, warmed by its endless flow. Breath of romance, heart-beats of adventure. Man they called Sparks.

She had wished to talk with him, hear the thrilling tale of his work. A novel at first hand, movie never filmed. Life stranger than fiction, if you could rise above the humdrum levels.

And he had forgotten her. He didn't even see her.

"Well," she sighed dimly. "Well—"

"LAST DITCH" STANDS TO BE MADE SATURDAY

PURDUE BEATEN BY MICHIGAN 14 TO 13 IN OPENING CONFERENCE GAME

STILL HAS CHAMPIONSHIP ASPIRATIONS, MAY DEFEAT WISCONSIN

By DIXON STEWART
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Oct. 24.—Purdue's Boilermakers, 1929 Big Ten champions, and Bob Zuppke's green but dangerous Illini were keyed today for "last ditch" stands which may upset current calculations on the 1930 western conference race.

Purdue, beaten by Michigan, 14-13, in its opening conference game, still has championship aspirations and can remain a dangerous contender by defeating Wisconsin in Saturday's homecoming contest at Ross-Ade Stadium, Lafayette.

Although four teams — Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Northwestern—are unbeaten in Big Ten competition, the Boilermakers play more conference games than their rivals and can retain the title on a percentage basis if no contender completes the season with a clean slate. Purdue has six conference games, one more than any other team.

Illinois entertains little hope of winning the title, but the Illini are proud of their record as "upset" producers and hope to scramble the race by defeating Michigan and shattering their traditional rivals' hopes of a conference championship.

Purdue and Wisconsin apparently are equally matched, although Purdue already has sustained one defeat. Wisconsin has piled up 142 points in four games against Lawrence, Carleton, Chicago and Pennsylvania, leading the west in scoring.

Wisconsin's great showing against Pennsylvania has won the Badgers recognition as one of the west's most powerful squads, but Purdue also boasts a powerful line and a capable backfield. A capacity crowd of 30,000 is expected in Ross-Ade Stadium.

Games between Wisconsin and Purdue are traditionally close and the 1930 contest should be no exception to the rule. Both squads are in top condition and with defeat certain to eliminate the loser from championship consideration, Coaches Kizer of Purdue and Thistlethwaite of Wisconsin are prepared to "shoot the works" for victory.

Only three other games are scheduled. Ohio State, Minnesota and Iowa have open dates with the remaining schools playing intersectional games.

Northwestern meets Centre in a "breather" prior to resuming a strenuous Big Ten schedule while Chicago's weak team meets an equally unsuccessful opponent in Mississippi.

Indiana travels to Dallas, Texas, for a game with Southern Methodist University which probably will leave Texas fans with an unfavorable impression of the calibre of Big Ten football.

CRISLER DRILLING SQUAD FOR GAME WITH NORTHWESTERN

Minneapolis, Oct. 24.—(U.P.)—Minnesota has no game tomorrow but Coach Fritz Crisler is drilling his squad overtime in preparation for the invasion of Northwestern on November 1. In yesterday's scrimmage, Boland, tackle, and Manders, fullback, made the best showings against the freshmen team.

GAME OF CHARGE, COUNTER-CHARGE, BEGINNING EARLY

LAMENTING MANY YOUNG MEN HAVE BEEN DOING AND DYING FOR DOLLARS

PROTESTS FROM RIVAL COACHES REFLECT SERIOUSLY ON TRUE AMATEUR SPIRIT

By HENRY McELMORE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Oct. 24.—The game of charge and counter-charge in regard to professional aspects of college football has begun two months earlier than usual.

It is the custom to wait until the last whistle has sounded over a December gridiron before lamenting the fact that many of the young men have been doing and dying for dollars instead of for dear old Dalyrymple.

Nor is it necessary this year to await a report from trained investigators sent out by the Carnegie Foundation. From rival coaches and even from players themselves have come a number of protests reflecting seriously on the true amateur spirit.

Two of the these outbursts came yesterday — the first from Columbia, Mo., involving alleged recruiting of athletics in the Big Six conference, the second from Washington, D. C., where five members of the George Washington University freshmen team were suspended from all participation in the school's athletics. The suspension followed an "insurrection" at which the players were said to have demanded salaries, free tuition, and board for their athletic services.

The Big Six controversy centers in Jim Bausch, Kansas backfield star, who has been under fire since he left the University of Wichita for the University of Kansas. University of Missouri officials made a vigorous protest of Bausch's eligibility and "athletics loans" made to him, and planned to present them to a conference committee which meets at Columbia today.

Bausch, in addition to being a star football player, is a salesman for a Kansas life insurance company headed by a Kansas alumnus.

The reported behavior of the George Washington freshmen marked a new high spot in frankness, if not in tact. Their suspension by the athletic director was upheld by Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university.

Two other disturbing incidents, though not connected with professionalism, have occurred during the past few days. In Philadelphia, Rolf Carlsten, University of Pennsylvania backfield ace, was ordered to turn in his uniform by Head Coach Lud Wray. Carlsten was among the players accused of "indifference" during the Wisconsin game last Saturday which Penn lost.

The second disturbing incident took place at Ogelthorpe University in Atlanta where Muddy Adams, guard on the first eleven, was dismissed from the university after authorities had investigated alleged wine-making activities in school dormitories.

Myth Exploded

The widely credited possibility of ships becoming embedded in the weeds of the Sargasso sea, and being unable to escape was disproved by the expedition of the Michael Sars under the direction of Sir John Murray in 1910, which found the surface covered with weeds only in patches, not continuously. The Beebe expedition later verified this statement.

"JUDY" By Winifred Van Duzer

PEGGY ARCHER would have preferred her daughter, Judith, to be a little more carefree and frivolous, instead of a purposeful and sensible young woman. There was, however, a lighter side to Judith's nature—one that loved life and romance. Could her mother have seen her capering through dance steps in the seclusion of her classroom, she would have held a different opinion of her daughter. But the responsibility of supporting her mother by teaching school, following her father's death, causes Judy to curb pleasure. She dislikes men. An old friend, Captain Charley Marceau, persuades her to book passage for her mother and herself for a cruise on his ship "Mokawk." She meets Kit Camp, the ship's wireless operator.

CHAPTER V.

JUDY asked no questions about the boxes and bundles the station taxi man left all over the hall. But she did learn that the sports dress would be a three-piece suit, almond green, and not plain at all, what with a pleated skirt and a scarf bordered by gold and salmon pink. She admitted that the colors were pretty, but objected that it did not seem durable.

Peggy giggled. Pretended to be helplessly amused. "Let's be frivolous for once, Judy. Forget next season and next month. Squander today. Grow butterfly wings. . . . Care to see the rest of your things tonight?"

"Ummm——"

"Tomorrow, then." But Peggy did not mention the matter and Judy would not admit that she was interested enough to speak of it first. And since Peggy insisted upon taking care of all the packing herself they were somewhere off the coast of Maine before Judy suspected the truth about her new wardrobe. Then it was too late for anything to be done.

They were sailing on the Mohawk's first excursion cruise of the season. And by Friday noon the trunk was packed and sent away and Peggy was having a shampoo and wave and massage and manicure in her room. But Judy got out, Hannibal, and in spite of the knocking engine, drove ten miles to a movie theatre which was showing the storm at sea.

Peggy worried about a dozen things over night. Supposing it should rain tomorrow? Supposing they should miss the ferry? Miss the train—the boat? Supposing they lost their tickets? Supposing the trunk didn't arrive safely?

"Do hush up, Mother. There isn't as much hard luck as you can think of."

"But I've got a feeling we'll be late."

They were not late. The sun shone and their trunk was carried aboard just as the taxi put them down at the end of a shifting, chattering line waiting to board the ship.

Judy sat on the deck and watched. Color. Movement. Noise. Laughter. Kisses.

Dozen of times she had been the center of scenes like this. But it always was in that shadowy world where the other Judy lived; always it was the other Judy who tripped up gangplanks, her arms filled with flowers, laughing, waving, calling good-byes. The other Judy who wrapped herself in rainbows, trod on sparkles, wore stars in her hair.

Judy herself knew that she looked severe and uninteresting, rather school-teacherish in spite of the almond green suit and the soft little almond green hat Peggy had bought to match. Tortoise-rimmed spectacles—nose gone shiny since she wouldn't use her vanity in public—hair too tight behind her ears.

And she tried to tell herself that all the scramble—the good-byes, the kisses, even the tears—that all of it was silly. She tried to feel dignified and disapproving as the band played "Aloha," and the "Mohawk" began to move slowly out into the harbor, pennants flying, confetti blowing, colored streamers winding over the river.

But she felt lonely instead.

Then the harbor winds were in her face, wrapping her in their strong, cool arms, whispering at her ears. New York was drawing away — growing blurred like a scene in a dream. Now she could make out Sea Gate. Well, they were going. . . .

A young man loitered by, touched his cap, gave her a half inquiring smile. "Well—think you'll like it?"

She remembered Peggy with a little twinge of premonition. Ought to know better than leave her to herself; something always happened when she did. Something to do with elderly and fatuous gentlemen. . . .

The gentleman this time was middle-aged and gray-haired and pinky-faced, and he was in the chair next to Peggy's, settled with an air of permanency and satisfaction. And Peggy looked very little and young and coquettish tucked into a robe with a blue scarf twisted about her head, her hands making small, fluttery movements.

Why couldn't Peggy be more dignified? Starting right in the way she acted with old Peter Bontell . . . Judy's teeth clicked; her chin raised sharply; the spectacles were very accusing with the afternoon sun striking on their lenses.

Still there were plenty of other couples not being exactly dignified. Judy had to admit this. Young men and young women, and men and women not so young. They were pairing off. Later she learned that the pairs would shift rapidly for a few hours and finally everybody would settle down in twos.

A young man loitered by, touched his cap, gave her a half inquiring smile. "Well, think you'll like it?"

"No!" The tone she used with little Roy Varman.

The young man muttered "Gosh!" and fled.

Then a tall figure came along the deck, strolling with a relaxed air, hat in hand, gazing out to sea. Wavy brown hair stirred by the wind, half smiling lips parted over marvelously white, marvelously even teeth.

His eyes were green like the sea where waves are deep.

Judy caught her breath. Heat wrapped her throat, crept up her cheeks, circled her forehead. Oh outrageous! Never in her life had she blushed before, and here she stood like a lummox staring and trying to swallow the lump in her throat because a man was passing, because he would speak to her, perhaps.

She put her arm on the rail, tried to turn away. No use, though. He held her fascinated gaze as he came nearer, swinging his hat, moving in a jaunty, carefree way.

"How—how do you do?" She said it in the instant his glance flicked across her face. But the words ran together in a jumble and were lost in the whooshing of the wind. He sauntered on without really seeing her at all.

Now she could turn, lean over carelessly, look at the waves cutting along the side of the ship. They looked solid, very firm, as if they had been carved from crystal. He didn't see her. Didn't know she was there.

She had thought about him; let her imagination run wild. Young thing sitting aloft like a god on a throne listening to the talk of men borne on the wings of wind. Fingers at the very pulse of life, warmed by its endless flow. Breath of romance, heart-beats of adventure. Man they called Sparks.

She had wished to talk with him, hear the thrilling tale of his work. A novel at first hand, movie never filmed. Life stranger than fiction, if you could rise above the humdrum levels.

And he had forgotten her. He didn't even see her.

"Well," she sighed dimly. "Well—"
